Should You Replace Your Smoke Detector?

Research has proven that smoke detectors save lives, and 3 out of 5 deaths occur where there is no working smoke detector. Reminders to replace batteries every six months are often linked to daylight savings time, which arrives this year on March 14. But how do you know if the smoke detector still works? Burnt toast? Recommended monthly tests? Right, we all do that, don't we? :)

Actually burnt toast is one reason smoke detectors are disabled. Not a good idea! Experts from the National Fire Protection Association recommend that we replace smoke detectors when they are 10 years old. Replace sooner if it chirps after installing a fresh battery, or if it doesn't sound when you perform "monthly" tests. This rule applies to both battery and hard wired detectors.

Most manufactured homes have hard wired detectors, and when I inspect homes I've noticed many of these are aged, painted over, or disconnected. Recently, I removed the two detectors at the office to get ready for paint. It was easy to locate the date of manufacture stamped on the back - 1999OCT27. So they're over 20 years old, which makes sense since the office was new in Jan 2020. Time to replace! The brand and model # were also on the back, and when I searched I found several choices for replacement. They were $14 apiece and should arrive in a few days.

Of course no one sleeps in the office (not counting my naps of course) but in your home you definitely need this simple and inexpensive safety device. So beginning with this year's home resale inspections, we will require the replacement of any smoke detectors over 10 years old. If your original units cannot be replaced, you may use battery operated detectors instead.

Why not take a few minutes now to maintain your smoke detectors? Clean, vacuum, dust. Hit the test button. Replace if it's over 10 years old. It could save a life.

Stay warm & healthy. Pray for peace. God Bless, Phil
